Is It Time to Update Your Associate Performance Evaluation Form?

e at the Report to Legal Management endeavor to bring you practical articles that are useful to you as you manage your law firm or other law office. One of the areas in which law firms sometimes don't do as well as they could (especially smaller firms) is that of performance evaluations or appraisals of their associates. Our experience is that many firms use evaluation forms that are not specific to law firm associates, and are sometimes instead modeled on the form being used to appraise the performance of the firm's support staff. We recently helped a firm develop an associate evaluation form, and we thought we would share it with you, for use in your office. We offer this form, set out on the following two pages, and hope that you find it helpful.

ASSOCIATE EVALUATION FORM

[Name of Law Firm]

This form is intended to assist the partners in the process of evaluating the performance of the firm's associates. For each associate, partners will be asked to complete the evaluation form.

The criteria contained in the form are not intended to be exhaustive. Views should be expressed on any aspect of the associate's performance and development that are considered important. Your assessment should be based on your own recent experience during the past six months

Bear in mind that associates need and deserve to know what areas the partners consider or perceive there to be room for improvement in their performance or progress. It is unfair to the associate not to candidly evaluate his or her performance. No one can improve their performance unless they know in what areas they are expected to improve.

The form asks you to rate the associate in a number of different areas and to supply comments that back up your ratings. Please take the time to give meaningful written comments. Numerical ratings without details backing them up are of little assistance or credibility to associates.

For each category of the evaluation, there is an assessment scale ranging from 1 (lowest) to 5 (highest). The assessment key is as follows:

- 1. Indicates significant concerns requiring immediate attention.
- 2. Indicates some concern requiring an effort to improve over time.
- Indicates acceptable progress being made.
- 4. Indicates good progress being made.
- 5. Indicates exceptional performance.

N/A Indicates don't know or too early too assess.
